Thursday night, hearing a noise in that vicinity, father and son advanced to ascertain the cause, when they were fired upon by unknown parties. The police are on the alert.

HIS REASON GONE.

Public Institutions for the Insane Already Full.

Application has been made to have Charles Carroll admitted to the Insane Asylum at Kalamazoo. The authorities at the Institution report that it is full, and that he cannot be admitted at present. Carroll's case is one of more than passing interest. He served as a soldier in the late war and made a good record for gallantry and faithfulness, was taken prisoner and compelled for some time to suffer the "horrors" of a southern prison. The abuses and exposure he was obliged to endure there, are the remote causes, which have tended to bring about his present misfortune.

Smith is Out of Politics.

Yesterday's Detroit Free Press in speaking of Governor-elect Alger's appointments, mentioned Will A. Smith, of this city, as probably private secretary to the Governor-elect. A Telegram reporter asked Smith last evening if there was any truth in the report that he was likely to receive such an appointment. He replied that "he had neither asked for, or been tendered the appointment, and would not accept it if it was offered. I will not accept any office at all, but shall give my undivided attention to the law business, and hope by hard work and strict attention to my profession to carve out a success more enduring and satisfactory than any political success I might possibly attain could hope to be." It is evident from these remarks that Mr. Smith's voluntary retirement from politics is permanent.

The Fortnightly Club.

Some twenty-five or thirty of the Universalist young people met at Rev. Mr. Fisher's house on South Prospect street last evening and formed a social club with the following officers: President, Chas. W. Holden; Vice Presidents, Miss Hattie Wykes, W. L. Snyder and Ada Hunt; Secretary, Miss Nellie Osterhout; Treasurer, Frank Jewell. It meets the first and third Fridays of each month. The next meeting will be at Mr. Fisher's.

It Looked Suspicious.

Patrolman Beattie, whose beat is on West Bridge street, ran across a man named Alexander Vinner, who was offering a horse and buggy for sale at $25. Suspecting at once that the rig did not belong to Vinner, Beattie arrested him and brought him to headquarters. A cheap watch also formed a consideration in the transaction. After being confined a little while, Vinner poured out to Sgt. Perry's satisfaction that the rig actually belonged to him and he was released.

THE SCIENTISTS.

Various Topics Discussed at Last Night's Regular Session.

The regular meeting of the Kent Scientific Institute, held in the high school last evening, was well attended. Dr. Parker presided, and the discussions among the members upon various topics were interesting and instructive. Samuel Dunlap, a resident of Walker township, presented the institute with a piece of wood about three feet long, and four inches in diameter, which he had found in Indian Creek about four feet beneath the surface of the ground. It had been cut by beavers years ago and used in building dams. Prof. Strong presented another piece of wood found in the clay, forty-two feet deep, at Brown & Clark's brick yard. He made some very interesting remarks about the beaver cutting dam; that the beavers built their dams across rivulets and small streams generally in the flats below larger dams.

Capt. Coffinbury presented his report on Archaeology and exhibited a gorget found in a mound in Ohio. Dr. Parker then spoke at some length on the German carp; He stated that it is now being extensively introduced in this country. The first specimens were brought to California in 1872. In 1870 three hundred were brought here from Germany and deposited at Baltimore and Washington. If there are other fish confined with the carp, they cannot be successfully reared. They deposit their spawn on plants growing in ponds. Warm water is best suited to rearing them, and the nearer it can be kept to an even temperature the better. Some have the erroneous idea that they can be propagated in our lakes and rivers the water must be pure and entirely free from any pest such as the muskrat snake, frog, etc. The interest in this fish is spreading, and its cultivation in this country increasing. The rearing of the carp will be a source of great service to the farmer, as it can be raised with profit and is considered excellent eating. Then followed a general discussion among the members, as to plans of exercises at future meetings. It was thought best to make some definite arrangement beforehand as to subjects to be discussed at the meetings.

Hon. S. L. Fuller, in his discussion complimented the energy displayed among the ladies belonging to the literary clubs, that their clubs numbered two hundred members, and that they took an ardent interest in their meetings, and had all been greatly benefited. Prof. Strong added that he was proud of the ladies of Grand Rapids who had taken such persistent interest in these clubs, and thought that the Institute ought to have a course of elementary talks on the various topics which naturally come under its consideration. A motion was made to invite Fred A. Holcomb, superintendent of the Grand Rapids Electric Light and Power Company, to talk or read a paper on the "Electrical Exhibit at Philadelphia," at the next meeting. The Institute then adjourned until the first Friday in December.

COOKING OYSTERS.

Mrs. Ewing's Instructions on the Subject Yesterday.

The attendance at Mrs. Ewing's lectures seems to be increasing rather than diminishing. Yesterday she devoted the afternoon to teaching the ladies how to cook oysters. She manipulated the bivalves, giving them their coats of breadcrumbs, egg batter and cracker crumbs, and then put them into the boiling fat. The aroma arising made every one in the hall wish for a chance to test practically the superior excellence of Mrs. Ewing's cookery. But only the reporters present were allowed to taste the fried oysters, the ladies could only look at them and be satisfied with a scalloped oyster on a piece of bread. The lecture to-day will be on French candies, and will be a fitting close to Mrs. Ewing's efforts to instruct the ladies of this vicinity in the very important art of cookery. But she will be succeeded next week by Mrs. Sophie W. Knight, and the ladies who have been so regular in their attendance upon this course will no doubt avail themselves of the opportunity to be further instructed in the art of making home happy.

JOHN AND MARTHA.

They Do Not Agree and John Sues for Freedom.

That the course of true love never did run smooth, is a fact acknowledged by mankind in general, since Adam's day. But that John Rank, who married Martha Gingham, at Holland City, April 22, 1876, suspected the saw was as rough as it read, is more than an open question. The records of yesterday in the Superior Court shows that John wishes he had never met Martha, and that the aforesaid "course" is rougher than flesh and his mortal endurance can possibly bear. In his oratorical bill addressed to Judge Parrish he asserts that, although their union had given them two of God's children, Martha had an ungovernable temper, and was of an extremely jealous disposition. That she constantly neglected her household duties and frequently and wickedly neglected her motherly duties to ward her offspring; and further, this tale of matrimonial lament goes on to say that Martha, on one or more occasions, called her spouse a d—d fool, locked him out of the house and the children in, while she was out "gadding," visiting her neighbors, and vilifying him whom she had sworn to love, honor and obey. He said John, also testified that Martha had treated him coldly, and even at times would go to bed without speaking to him, and at others followed him about at his daily labors, abusing him and calling him harsh names. Hence John wishes that Martha may go and be as if he had never known her, and believes a bill of divorce will satisfy his mind.

THE STANTON AFFAIR.

Still a Mystery—A Brother Thinks a Brother Injured.

A Telegram reporter in an interview with a brother of Mr. Geo. W. Stanton, last evening, learned that the wounded man was doing well though still suffering somewhat from his lame arm and an aggravated toothache occasioned by a recent dental operation. This brother, L. B. Stanton, proprietor of the Michigan Trade Journal, thought George had been unfairly treated in the TELEGRAM's account of the "rather mysterious" affair, inasmuch as no reference had been made to the fact that the said George is very near-sighted, and without glasses cannot recognize a friend across the room. This optical weakness may possibly explain why he cannot give a more complete description of his antagonist. In both affairs his glasses are supposed to have been knocked from his eyes, and hence may account for his not being able to recognize fully the countenance of his assailant. The description he gives to Chief Detective Moran is that the man wore a black slouch hat, had a moustache, wore a grayish-colored overcoat and was stoutly built, of a height a few inches greater than himself. L. B. has the utmost confidence in his brother's statements, and is as much at sea to explain a motive on the part of the attacking party as the rest of the public.

Michigan Sportsmen.

E. S. Holmes, president of the Michigan Sportsmen's Association, has issued a notice of an adjourned meeting of the association to be held at Jackson on Tuesday, Dec. 9, "for the transaction of very important business." Particular attention will be called to renewed efforts to secure the appointment of a State Fish and Game Warden, or Wardens. Some more efficient means of securing obedience to our Fish and Game laws, the notice says, must be adopted, or the property of the people here referred to will disappear in a few years more.

THE COOKING SCHOOL.

A Correspondent Discourses on its Various Benefits.

There is a common saying nowadays that "if our foresight was as clear as our hindsight how many rough places in the walks of life would be made smooth?"

The young man, when he arrives at the age of maturity, forms the acquaintance of his ideal of perfection. Her comely looks please his eye, her musical voice pleases his ear, and those senses combined with that indefinable attribute called love, make her an object of perfection to him. Had she wings, she would surely be an angel. But after the person has rendered his services and housekeeping has commenced, there is a break in the current of harmony between the eye, the ear and the stomach. The stomach becomes clogged, that dims the eye, and dulls the ear so that those meditative moments that once thought that she only lacked wings to make her an angel, now thinks that she lacks skill in the kitchen to make her home a heaven fit for angels. That fine musical education is only one of the elements of happiness. Could those fine parlor entertainments be exchanged for a few kitchen entertainments to him the change would be very acceptable.

As the stomach grows sick the eye grows dim and the ear grows dull, until in his deep meditations, instead of thinking of his recent ideal, he is thinking of all his enemies, how he would like to invite them to dinner, and then see them groan with the dyspepsia for a week afterward.

But even the dyspeptic, the most discontented of all the dissatisfied is looking cheerful this week. He has heard that Mrs. Ewing and Mrs. Knight have started a cooking school here; and he is going to avail himself of his hind sight, and send his ideal, though perfect as she is, to that school. He feels confident that if he can get the lectures of those ladies reduced to practice in his kitchen, it will save his pocket, it will save his stomach, save his temper and save his high appreciation of his ideal.

We heard one of those lectures yesterday; there was a good-sized audience present, but they were not there to go home and practice what they were taught. Had some of those ladies taken their kitchen girls with them they would derive greater benefit from the lectures.

But Mrs. Knight resides in this city, and Mrs. Ewing promised to come here again the week before Christmas and give a course of lectures free, providing the citizens would furnish a hall and pay the disbursements, then we will have all the cooks attend; and if we can have such cooking as those ladies gave us at the hall become general we will see so many smiling faces in the streets that every Democrat will declare that it is the result of a change of administration. C.

The Sohmer.

Even in the severe climate of South America the Sohmer piano is known for its great durability and excellent musical quality. The Muebec Courier of the 19th inst. brings the following item:

"Two Sohmer uprights have been shipped to Mollendo, Peru; two Bijon grands to Caracas, Venezuela, and two Bijon grands will be shipped this week to Vera Cruz, Mexico."

This speaks well for the Sohmer, which can be purchased in this city at the warehouses of Mr. Paul W. Friedrich, No. 21 Monroe street.

Boys' Gray Overcoats, $1.50.

Boys' Black Chinchilla Overcoats, $1.50.
